CHAPTER ONE

1. Euripides (480-406 B.C.), Greek tragic poet. The New Dictionary of Thoughts, A Cyclopedia of Quotations. Originally compiled by Tryon Edwards, D.D., Revised and enlarged by C.N. Catrevas, A.B., Jonathan Edwards, A.M. and Ralph Emerson Browns, A.M., Standard Book Company, 1966.
2. In 1839, Pastor Johann A. S. Grabau, together with members of his congregation in Saxony (an Austrian province), as well as many Lutherans living in Pommern and other regions of Prussia, felt compelled to emigrate. Captain Heinrich von Rohr, who later entered the ministry, and the military-musician, Friedrich Mueller, former pastor of Trinity Evangelical Lutheran Church at Freistadt, Wisconsin, was among the earliest “Old Lutheran” immigrants. Pastor Grabau settled with members of his congregation in Buffalo, New York. Most of the Old Lutherans from Pommern, however, traveled further west to Wisconsin, some settling in Milwaukee, while others established their new homes in the Freistadt area, northwest of Milwaukee.
In 1840, King Frederick William III died and his son, Frederick William IV, granted freedom of worship to the Lutherans. Thus, a new Lutheran church convened its first synod in 1841. However, many church leaders felt that the prior conflict had weakened the spirit of the church and strongly disagreed with the resolutions of this first synod.
In spite of the theological differences of the various religious factions in Prussia during the nineteenth century, the average peasant was little influenced in the many small villages of Prussia. The individuals who emigrated due to religious oppression were mainly of the church’s hierarchy and ministers. The church did, however, play an important role in providing information, routes of travel, interim lodging, etc., for those who chose to emigrate, for whatever reason, and there were many. Religious persecution, however much touted, was not the primary reason for the vast emigration to America.

CHAPTER TWO

1. Frederick Henry Hedge, The New Dictionary of Thoughts, A Cyclopedia of Quotations, Originally compiled by Tryon Edwards, D. D., Revised and Enlarged by C. N. Catrevas, A. B., Jonathan Edwards, A. M., and Ralph Emerson Browns, A. M., Standard Book Company, 1966, p 21.
2. Virtually all of the Heuer family ancestors were located within a small geographical area in Pommern, Prussia. All of the localities mentioned in church records for births, baptisms, marriages, and deaths of the family members and many of their spouses lie within the boundaries of Kreis Greifenberg. Kreis is the German term that denotes a lower-level administrative area within a German state. The term Kirchenkreis refers to the administration of a number of church parishes. Political sub-divisions of Germany are quite complex and shifted over time. Moreover, it is important to note that a surprising number of these sub-divisions no longer exist in what today are the Polish states.
Records for the Heuer ancestors were found solely in the church records – first at Carnitz, then Zitzmar, and finally Borntin. The fact that no civil records were kept until 1874 made them doubly precious. At the end of each year, each pastor would make a duplicate copy of his year’s records and submit it to a higher authority for safekeeping. These duplicate copies are the ones filmed by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormons). They are kept in special archives housing only Evangelische records.
Neides, Karnitz, Nitznow, Moitzow, Schruptow, Rensekow, Voightshagen, Gutzlaffshagen, Goerke, Treptow, Glensee, Zitzmar, and Zirkvitz no longer exist under those names but were changed when Prussia was ceded to Poland in 1947. As a point of reference, the population of Goerke in 1939 was 246 and of Rensekow 271. If the average family included seven people there would be roughly thirty-five families in Goerke and thirty-eight in Rensekow.
Neides, where the Heuer history began and now the Polish village of Neidcysz, was one of the four small villages in Pommern surrounding the larger village of Karnitz (in church records Carnitz, now Karnice, Poland). The central church was located in Karnitz, and the villages of Schruptow (now Skrobotowo), Gutzelvitz (now Goclawice) and Dresow (now Drzezwo) were all in Kreis Greifenberg. Another village attached to this church in Karnitz was Nitznow (now Niczonow) in Kreis Kammin.
The Evangelische congregation, consisting of Dresow, Gutzelvitz, Nitznow, Neides, and Schruptow was centered in Karnitz, which had the only church and the pastor’s home. One minister served all five villages and he was kept busy. He was also the best educated of anyone in his congregation, so it was his duty to record all vital statistics for his people. The records were kept in one book, but each entry – whether a birth, marriage, or death record – named the specific village where the event occurred.
For seventy-five years these five villages had the marvelous good fortune to be led by father-son pastors whose devotion to their church family was apparent. Johann Joachim Strecker, the pastor of the Karnitz central church, was born in 1698. He studied in Bautzen and Halle and after ordination, took the Karnitz position in 1730. In the same year, he was married to Louisa Juliana Ureck. They settled in the Karnitz parsonage and were quickly absorbed into the community where their son, Johann George, was born 28 April 1739. When the son reached maturity, he studied at the same schools as his father, and joined him in the Karnitz church, assuming the full-time pastor position when his father retired.
One of the many tasks that the younger Pastor Strecker would do for his congregation was to transcribe the record books. He deplored the fact that many pastors often took the record books with them when they moved to a new parish. To prevent that from happening in Karnitz, he laboriously copied, by hand in very legible handwriting, all the records from 1765 onward. He was still absorbed in the recording process when he had to retire because of age, ill health, or both. It was a heritage that would not only be used by the villagers themselves but for all their descendants as well. The church archives recorded by this dedicated pastor included all births, marriages, and deaths for the five localities, all carefully delineated so there was no doubt from which village the subject came. Although these pastoral annals were meticulously handwritten, there were mistakes and omissions, some of which will keep us forever in the dark. It appears that the omissions were those inscriptions that would serve us most to identify some ancestors and clarify lineage. Errors were primarily the entry of an incorrect name. With the constant recurrence of the same name, repeated time and time again, one can see that errors could easily occur. The reader will observe very early that these people seemed to be name poor, that is, it appears there were only certain names that were acceptable. It was not until the second generation in the United States that this custom began to disappear.

A recent visitor to the area would describe two of the villages as being totally unchanged from the time they were founded. Both Rensekow and Goerke were originally built in the traditional style of a church surrounded by a cemetery in the center of the village, then surrounded by a ring of houses, barns, and buildings of the individual farmers and then by the fields. Any evidence of this land once being under German ownership has disappeared. However, in Greifenberg the old cathedral still majestically stands as one of the few reminders of the past century. Today the churchyards are barren and most remnants of the old cemeteries are lost in time. Large iron crosses that once marked graves are gone – most removed long ago – pulled up and sold for scrap iron. Europeans generally do not allow their dead to occupy their underground space forever because their grounds are limited. Instead, that designated burial space may belong to several occupants over the centuries. Attempts to find grave markers for our ancestors were unfulfilling.

3. While the social circumstances were quite different, the best and closest analogy in concept to the Gut were the plantations in the American South. The owner not only controlled the land, but to a considerable extent, the workers as well. A Swedish-Danish co-produced movie, Pelle the Conqueror, made in 1987, accurately depicted life on a Gut in Denmark during the 1890s. It is a story of an impoverished older Swedish widower and his seven-year-old son who emigrate from Sweden to Bornholm, a Danish island in the Baltic, to find work with hopes of improving his lot in life. Instead of finding a better life, the old man and his son are reduced to virtual slavery. It is a heart-wrenching film that details life on a Gut. Even though the setting is Denmark, the Guts there were identical to those in Pommern or the southern shores of the Baltic Sea, both in design and construction. Pelle the Conqueror is an excellent film that portrays how our ancestors lived. An English version achieved considerable success in the United States and is certainly worth viewing. This was followed by two sequels, the first being the Emigrants, the story of a family struggling to survive on their farm in the old country, but who finally decide to emigrate to America. Their complete journey to Minnesota is accurately portrayed: on an emigrant ship, by train, and finally on a riverboat to their final destination – the forest wilderness. The second is The New Land. This movie follows the family and their new friends through the hardships as they settle into a new life in a new country. All of these are excellent, historically accurate films and provide an outstanding perspective on the lives of our ancestors.
4. Any unmarried female at that time was designated as a servant in church records.
5. Before the Heuer family moved to Kahlen, a vacancy in that village had to exist. Perhaps a very able-bodied man had died in Kahlen, leaving a void in the workforce of the supervisor or land manager. This position needed to be filled if he wanted to keep up the level of production. The deceased's widow and children, if any, were moved in with other family members in the same village, or another, creating an empty house for a new, complete, family. The Heuer family may have requested to move or were transferred by the landlord. In any case, they were a bargain because three grown men – Martin, Johann Friedrich, and Carl Gottlieb – along with wife and mother, Louise, – were the replacement family. Since they probably owned only a few household furnishings, the move would have been very easy to accomplish. Although this is pure conjecture, the scenario, coupled with knowledge of how and where peasants lived in the 1800s, is entirely plausible and may explain this and subsequent moves of the Heuer family.
6. The first mention of the Heuer family in the Zirkvitz church records was 17 February 1827. The occasion was the birth of Martin and Louise Brockhuss Heuer's daughter, Maria Caroline Friederike. This record, as mentioned elsewhere, was an example of the many mistakes to be found in copied church books. Anyone researching the birth of Maria Caroline or (Caroline Marie) Heuer will be puzzled about the parent's names. Her father was given as Martin Heuer and her mother should have been listed as Louise Brockhuss. Instead, the mother's name was recorded as, "Dorothea Sophia Brockhuss." Dorothea was the older sister of Louise who had died a few years earlier. This is a prime example of the fallibility of records, even if they are the original ones. It is known that Louise Brockhuss Heuer was still living at this time, and her death would not be recorded until many years later.

CHAPTER THREE

1. Author Unknown.
2. Anyone researching the birth of Maria Caroline Friederike or Caroline Maria Heuer, as she was known later, will be puzzled by names recorded for her parents. Her father was given as Martin Heuer and her mother should have been listed as Louise Brockhuss. Instead she was recorded as Dorothea Sophia Brockhuss. Dorothea was the older sister of Louise, who had died a few years earlier. This is a prime example of the fallibility of records, even if they are the original ones. It is known that Louise Brockhuss Heuer was still living at this time, and her death would not be recorded until many years later.
3. The birth records of Friederike Louise Ruhnke and her sister, Catharina Sophia, were never found in spite of focused research. The birth date of Friederike Louise was established by both her confirmation and death record. Catharina Sophia's records, however, were not as consistent. Her confirmation record listed her birth date as 3 February 1808 while all other records at the time of her death list her birth date as 25 March 1808. When she died on 24 March 1899, her obituary suggested she would have celebrated her ninety-first birthday the day following her death. It is impossible to accept that she and her family did not know her correct birth date so we must conclude that the date of birth recorded on her confirmation record was incorrect. We, therefore, have recorded her birth date as 25 March 1808 for this history and that was the date placed on her headstone when it was replaced in 1996.

7. Much of the early history of the town of Wolf, later Ahnepee, was gleaned from articles in the Kewaunee Enterprise, established in June 1859, and the Ahnepee Record, established in June 1872. Since the Ahnepee Record began publishing twelve years after the first settlement of Wolf River, M. T. Parker, who worked for the publishers, Wing and Borgman, wrote a short history for publication in the Ahnepee Record. The history was presented in the form of a weekly serial beginning in July 1873, titled, "Historical Sketch of the Town of Ahnapee." By the time the articles were published, the town of Wolf had changed to town of Ahnepee and then town of Ahnapee.
8. This information and some of the other later information relating to Charles Griswold Boalt, Edward Decker, and DeWayne Stebbins was published in an excellent article written by Frederick H. Neuschel about the politics and business of Ahnapee and Kewaunee County, entitled: "The Clique vs. the Croakers: Class and Conflict in Small-Town Wisconsin." The article was published in the Wisconsin Magazine of History, Winter, 1997-1998 edition by the State Historical Society of Wisconsin. Information pertaining to these individuals also came from articles in the Kewaunee Enterprise and Ahnapee Record.
9. Census records were not recorded with a great deal of accuracy. Language may also have been a barrier. The census taker may not have completely understood the language of the citizen being queried, and this sometimes resulted in erroneous information being recorded. One was fortunate to find the people who were supposed to be living at the time, but were not always lucky enough to find names spelled correctly and ages recorded as they should have been. Another glaring error found in a census record of another family, showed the whole family aging only seven years, although the federal census was always taken ten years apart. They should have been ten years older.

CHAPTER FOUR

1. Horace Mann, The New Dictionary of Thoughts, A Cyclopædia of Quotations, Originally Compiled by Tryon Edwards, Revised and Enlarged by C. N. Catrevas, Jonathan Edwards, and Ralph Emerson Browns, Standard Book Company, 1966.
2. More about the Gutzlaffshagen record: Peter Lüdke was the scribe for the congregation. He was Martin August Raether Jr.'s father-in-law. Many Ruhnke families were found in the record here, along with Marquardts, Arndts, Korths, Boettchers, Havels, Neubauers, Eberts, Grunewalds, Heidmanns, and Hoppes. This revelation reinforces the idea that people emigrated in groups rather than individually.
3. An excellent eyewitness account of the Peshtigo, Wisconsin fire is available from the State Historical Society of Wisconsin. It is titled, Wisconsin Stories – The Great Peshtigo Fire, by Reverend Peter Pernin. It is also available in most area libraries. Another history of the fires in Peshtigo, the surrounding area, and in Kewaunee and Door counties, is the book entitled, Embers of October, by Robert W. Wells. It is available at the Peshtigo Historical Society. This excellent book provides vivid first-person accounts of the devastation of the fire on 8 October 1871 over a broad area of northeastern Wisconsin and western Michigan.
4. Martin F. Heuer relates this story: "Seventy years later, evidence of the fires devastation still remained. As a young boy, my grandfather, Arnold Heuer, my father, Orland Heuer, my brother, David Heuer, and I harvested firewood from the forty acres of wooded land along Carnot Drive in the dead of winter. I vividly remember working in an area of the woods that was swampy and not accessible during the rest of the year, but it was now frozen and we were able to get to the dead trees that we could use. There were a number of huge stumps, blackened, and showing every indication they had been in a fire. This seemed very odd to me, so I asked my grandfather about it. He answered that he had asked his father, Fred Heuer, the same question. Fred told him the stumps were what still remained of the great fire of 1871. The stumps, soaked in the ever-present water of the swamp, did not deteriorate as quickly as those above ground and exposed to the elements. It was not until years later that I learned of the extent of the fire and its damage."
5. Although the 2nd Annual County Fair was held in Kewaunee in 1861, lack of interest, or the Civil War must have caused cessation, because in 1873, the First Annual County Fair was held in Kewaunee by The Kewaunee County Agricultural Society. (The Kewaunee Enterprise, 1873).
6. The documents listed the name of Caroline's birthplace as Steinmaukow, but detailed maps of the area for the years including 1843 listed no village or town by that name. There was a village named Steinmockler, in Kreis Anklam, Pommern, Prussia. We believe this is where Caroline was born. This village is very near Krien (Crien) where her father, Johann Friedrich Christian, was born and Neetzow where her mother, Caroline Johanne Marie Blohm, was born. It is also only a few miles from Zemmin where the family lived before emigrating.
7. This passport is the only one known to exist among the many immigrant families in this history. A copy of it was graciously provided by Jean Alberta Yauger Haddix of Lockport, Illinois. Jean is a great-granddaughter of Ferdinand and Caroline Berndt Heuer. This precious document has been passed down from generation to generation and confirms, without question, the origin of the Berndt family. Thank you, Jean! This is the only family passport known to have survived. It is reproduced as an example of the document each family, or individual had to apply for and possess to emigrate. The translation from German to English was accomplished by Mr. Hans Seebohm of Orlando, Florida, eighty-two years old and an emigrant himself, who is fluent in the old German language.
8. The Civil War, sometimes referred to as the War of the Rebellion, quickly roused the emotions of the participants. When the war began, the soldiers of the southern armies of the Confederation, representing those who had rebelled against the established Union, adopted the name rebels. The northern soldiers of the Union armies also quickly adopted this slang name for the rebellious southerners.

The name – rebel – was never given the same status as the word – Union. When the word was written into the events of the time, by the participants or by historians, northern writers most often did not capitalize the word rebel. Many southern writers also used the lower case. Throughout this modest writing of the events that took the life of August Ferdinand Heuer and forever changed the life of Johann Friedrich (Fred) Heuer, we have not capitalized the word rebel. We believe this is how August and Fred would have wanted it.

9. We did not know where August Ferdinand Heuer had been buried. We found records that only stated he had died of typhoid fever in Alexandria, Virginia on 22 May 1865. We could only assume he had been buried in an unmarked grave. Many of the Civil War dead were quickly buried in mass graves near the hospitals where the men died. This was done to prevent the spread of disease but could also have been an expedient method of disposing of the mounds of dead from both combat and disease. Searches made over a span of six years through several federal government agencies finally produced exciting results. A final attempt to locate the burial site for August was made in early February 2000 when yet another telephone inquiry, followed by a written request, was submitted to the National Archives Records Administration in Washington, D. C. Within a couple of weeks, a letter was received from the National Archives indicating that August was buried at Arlington National Cemetery. Previous inquiries made directly to Arlington offices and a personal visit to the cemetery had not produced positive results, undoubtedly because of the many different spellings of August Heuer's name, which apparently had thwarted earlier attempts. After the National Archives notice was received in mid-February, a letter was immediately sent to Arlington National Cemetery requesting verification that August was indeed buried there. On 24 March 2000, verification arrived from Arlington National Cemetery that confirmed the earlier report from the National Archives. August Ferdinand Heuer was interred in the Arlington National Cemetery in Section 13, Grave Number 8048 under the name August Hyer. This is the name under which he served with Company I, 17th Wisconsin Infantry during the Civil War. Section 13 is a triangular plat bordered by Garfield Drive on the north; McPherson Drive on the south; and Meigs Drive on the east. August's gravesite is located in the most easterly segment of Section 13 that touches Meigs Drive and is midpoint between Garfield and McPherson.
10. Two things flowed into the District of Columbia in overwhelming numbers after the start of the Civil War: dying soldiers and escaped slaves. In a disturbing parallel, both of these groups were relegated to the hills of Arlington. By April 1863 over 10,000 refugees were living in filthy, overcrowded facilities within the city, and when smallpox broke out in the camp at Duff Green's Row, authorities decided to relocate as many former slaves as possible. Freedmen's Village was dedicated in December 1863, a few months before the cemetery on the other side of the hill. One hundred families moved into a well-planned community with a hospital, a home for the aged and infirm, and other buildings devoted to education and small-scale manufacturing. Although similar villages would be established during Reconstruction, the one at Arlington turned out to be a national showcase, which frequently drew members of the Lincoln cabinet to its celebrations. As the war ended and time wore on, the residents of Freedmen's Village became economically prosperous and politically active, but neighboring white communities grew increasingly resentful of them. The Federal government initially provided some measure of protection. It was ironic that former slaves had built a life of freedom on the Lee family's property, so there was no effort on the part of the government to force them off the land. However, in the 1890s, the government briefly lost Arlington in a Supreme Court decision to Lee's oldest son, Custis. When the property was legally bought from Custis Lee, it was designated a military installation, and civilians were therefore restricted.
11. This document is on file in the Kewaunee County Courthouse as document #91517, Volume 6 (MISC), along with several other documents addressing the estates of Ferdinand and Caroline.
12. Friedrich was a name that was Americanized a number of ways with no apparent consistency. The translation would have been Fredrich but that was seldom the result. Even Fredrick was not commonly used. The usual spelling was Frederick or Frederich, more than likely a phonetic translation. Fred Heuer favored Frederick and that is what is on his tombstone. However, throughout his life, his first name was spelled many ways on the various documents that are a part of the record that remains.
13. Second Lieutenant Francis E. Engle was an original member of the 14th Wisconsin Veteran Volunteer Infantry Regiment when it was organized at Camp Wood, Fond Du Lac, Fond Du Lac County, Wisconsin and mustered into United States Service on 20 January 1862. Lt. Engle was initially appointed to the rank of sergeant in Company E of the 14th, then as first sergeant and later was, for a time, the acting sergeant major of Worden's Battalion. He was commissioned a second lieutenant in Company E on 31 May 1865 in Washington, D.C., six days after marching in the Grand Review. Lieutenant Engle spent his entire Civil War service with Company E, from 20 January 1862 until he was mustered out with the other members of the unit on 9 October 1865. Lieutenant Engle was an educated young man who obviously liked adventure – and writing about it. He kept a meticulous diary of the daily events of his military service from which he later prepared a historical paper on Company E. Those papers, entitled: Worden's Battalion: Paper read by Capt. F. H. Magdeburg, at the First Annual Reunion of the 14th Wisconsin Vol. Infantry, held at Fond Du Lac, Wis., June 16-17, 1886 and Wordens Battalion and Company E of the 14th Wisconsin Veteran Volunteer Infantry. Paper prepared for Reunion of Regiment, Fond Du Lac, June 8, 9, and 10, 1904, By Lieut. Francis E. Engle are an excellent first person account of the travels, actions, and adventures of Lieutenant Engle and members of Company E. This day-by-day account provides us with the complete history of Fred Heuer's Civil War service. It is also a record of the service of August Ferdinand Heuer, Fred's brother. Although he served in Company I, 17th Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry Regiment, both units marched side by side to Savannah, Georgia, and through the Carolinas and Virginia to Washington, D.C. Another source for the Heuer brother's service was a history of Company E entitled, From Ahnapee to the Sea – Civil War Story about the 14th Wisconsin Regiment, Company "E," by Robert C. Anderson. This history is primarily about the 14th volunteers from Door and Kewaunee counties. It follows some of the men from Kewaunee, Forestville, and Ahnapee (Algoma); the men who were the first volunteers for the regiment who traveled to Manitowoc, Wisconsin to join a company that was organized as the, "Manitowoc and Kewaunee Volunteers," in October 1861. The unit became Company E and joined the regiment at Fort (Camp) Wood in Fond Du Lac, Wisconsin in late November. The story, provided by David Perry, is compiled from the diaries of the Perry brothers, Matthew and Richard. Richard was two years younger than Matthew when they enlisted in October and December 1861, respectively. It also includes excerpts from the diary of William B. Fagg who was twenty-seven years old, married, with two small children when he enlisted on 7 October 1861. All three were good friends, living in the Forestville, Wisconsin area and were pioneer farmers. Although these diaries were not a day-by-day account, they do include additional information and augment the history written by Lieutenant Engle. Both of these documents were invaluable sources for the daily drudgery that was the life of the Civil War soldier. The Heuer family wishes to express its gratitude to Lieutenant Francis E. Engle, Matthew and Richard Perry, and William B. Fagg – and Robert C. Anderson – for these outstanding historical records. Without them, the Civil War service of Fred and August Heuer would not have been known.

14. In Sherman's memoirs, he states the engineers ferried, "Stone's brigade of Wood's Division." The account by Company E's Lieutenant Engle and Sherman may both be right, as brigades had decreased in size by this stage of the war.
15. Fred's discharge remains folded today, just as Fred folded it originally, in the possession of Wayne Paul Heuer, his great-grandson, who lives in Kewaunee, Wisconsin. Wayne also has Fred's GAR badge, enlistment and pay records, and other memorabilia of his Civil War service.
16. This problem was not unique to St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church because marriage records for the same period reflect many marriages, from various faiths, were conducted by Justices of the Peace in civil ceremonies.
17. The Heuer plat in St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Cemetery contained five burial spaces. Regina Clara Christina Heuer was buried in the first space, on the south end of the plat. Next to her, to the north, is Johann Friedrich, her grandfather, then Catharina Sophia, her grandmother. There was an open space and that is where the bronze veteran's marker for August Ferdinand Heuer, Johann Friedrich and Catharina Sophia's oldest son, is now installed. The last space to the north is where Johannes Friedrich Heuer, a son of Fred and Rosina Heuer, is buried. His original marker, like Regina's, was marble, weathered, and had become brittle. Many of the old markers in this cemetery have been broken by constant weather extremes, or by vandals. Sometimes the broken parts were reinstalled in a bed of asphalt and that was the case with Johannes Friedrich. With the permission of a cemetery representative, both Regina and Johannes marker were removed and replaced with new granite markers. Granite markers were also installed for Johann Friedrich and Catharina Sophia, to replace the originals, which no longer existed. This project was accomplished by Martin F. and Rita M. Heuer, with monetary contributions from Diane Barbara Heuer Piette, Suzanne Emelyn Heuer Vlach, Sheila Ramona Heuer Green, and Ronald Henry Heuer, all great-great-grandchildren of Johann Friedrich and Catharina Sophia Heuer. Ramona Helen Heuer Ruhnke, a great-granddaughter, also made a monetary contribution.
18. All of the documents mentioned, and many more containing records of promissory notes, lists of expenses, statements of account, and Letters Testamentary are on file in the vault of the County Court, Kewaunee, Wisconsin. An effort was made to investigate further the mysterious disappearance of Christiane Damas Fax but no other records could be found. On the 1880 Federal Census, Frank J. Fax, thirty-three, and Christiane, twenty-five lived in a home in Ahnapee. The census also listed two boarders living in the same home. Other records may exist, perhaps in the offices of the police or sheriff's departments but those are not as easily accessed. That leaves many questions and possibilities, but it would have been nice to know what really happened to Christiane and where she lies today.
19. The task of collating the dates of birth for Heinrich Gericke was daunting. There were three different birth dates on the remaining items of record for Heinrich Friedrich Wilhelm Gericke. First, there was no record of his birth in Melzow, Prussia in the Evangelische church records where the vital statistics of all his siblings were recorded. The year 1835 was missing from the records microfilmed by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. His obituary stated he was born in 1834, but that was obviously incorrect since his sister, Auguste was born on 16 May 1834. St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church records state he was born on 5 May 1837 in Potsdam, Prussia. That account goes on to say he died on 15 August 1907 at the age of seventy-two years, three months, and ten days. Simple calculation immediately casts doubt on the year 1837 as being correct. The birth date on the headstone on his grave in St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Cemetery is 15 May 1835. By all reasonable deduction this is his correct birth date. The matter of where he was born was also suspect since there was no register of his birth or confirmation. His obituary states he was born in Melso, but St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church record states he was born in Potsdam. Since this is the only reference to Potsdam, and all of his siblings born after him were born in Melzow, we believe that Melzow is where Heinrich was born. Melzow was frequently written as Melso. This spelling is not exactly Americanized, but was spelled more the way it sounded to the person writing it. In the Kewaunee church book, Ms. Gertrude Heuer, while conducting research, found people who had come from Fratshagen, which turned out to be Voightshagen. In further research, the obituary of Ms. Heuer's great-grandmother, Julia Pawlitzki, said she was from Dellschwitz. Ms. Heuer looked unsuccessfully until she decided to try, "sounds like." There she found Julia Pawlitzki in Bellschwitz.
20. Copies of these records are in the possession of the authors of this Heuer family history.
21. Caspar Zimmerman later became the great-grandfather to the fifth generation of Heuers when his granddaughter, Gertrude Mayme Zimmerman, married Orland Fred Heuer.
22. Hyalmar R. Holand, History of Door County, Wisconsin, The County Beautiful, Vol. 1. S. J. Clarke Publishing Company, 1917.
23. There was a major conflict in the history of the Zastrow family that was difficult to resolve. The obituaries for children Alvina, Anna, and John all state that they accompanied their parents, Charles and Bertha, to Upper Michigan for a period of about six years. The most definitive is John's obituary, which states that at age five, in the year 1892-93, he moved with his parents to Michigan but six years later – 1898-99 – they moved back to Door County. If this happened, Franz who was then at least twenty-one, could easily have taken over the farm and operated it for his parents. However, he died in the accident on 26 February 1894, and that event certainly changed everything, at least temporarily. Lydia was old enough, at twenty, to have left home to work or be married. Wilhelm, then about age nineteen could also have taken over the farm operation from Franz when he died. Wilhelm's obituary states he remained in the Forestville area until he was a young man of twenty years. It goes on to state that in 1912, he went to Upper Michigan where he worked in the sawmills. He would have been thirty-eight in 1912. Alvina's obituary states that as a young girl she accompanied her parents to Faunus, Michigan where they purchased and operated a sawmill and farm. There is evidence she worked in Escanaba, Michigan during the period in question. In 1892-93 she would have been sixteen. Karl's (Charles Jr.) obituary states he worked in lumber camps in the Forestville area before going into farming. No mention is made of the Upper Michigan venture even though he would only have been eleven or twelve in 1892-93. Anna and John, as already stated, went with their parents. Of course, Charles's mother, Wilhelmine, still living with them, must have moved to Ahnapee to live with one of her daughters. To further complicate matters, from January 1893, the year they supposedly went to Upper Michigan, to 1895, there were no less than seventeen property and mortgage transactions executed in Door County by the Zastrows. These included the purchase and sale of the eighty acres in section five, and the purchase of eighty acres with Sandermann on the joint venture sawmill and subsequent sale. The question is, how could Charles and Bertha be in Upper Michigan while all this was going on in Forestville Township? The answer was to lie in the property records, and from other information that came from the archives of Upper Michigan. The flurry of property transactions mentioned above abruptly ended on 9 April 1895 when Charles and Bertha sold to Anton Brey the eighty acres in section five. From that date until 11 November 1901 when they sold their eighty acre farm to Fred Heuer, Bertha's brother, who still lived on his homestead just north of the village limits in Ahnapee, not a single property transaction took place. This period, from April 1895 to November 1901, is just a little more than six years and is more likely the period referenced in the children's obituaries. No attempt has been made to research property records in Upper Michigan because Faunus, Michigan no longer exists. It was a village created by the sawmill industry, and when the logs were no longer available to be sawed, the village disappeared. The property records apparently still exist, perhaps in Escanaba if that is the county seat. Of course, this scenario renders the children's obituaries incorrect and should, once again, raise the flag of caution when researchers use obituaries as their sole source of information. However, this six-year absence from Forestville was not included in either Bertha's or Charles' obituary, but there may simply have not been enough space or deemed important enough.

CHAPTER FIVE

1. Walt Whitman, Pioneers! O Pioneers!
2. LDS film # 1381672, a microfilm copy of original records of St. Peter's German Evangelical Church, Buffalo, New York. This church record, written in pencil in a small record book eventually filmed by the Mormons, shows she was christened Marie Louise Bergin. No subsequent record showed that name.
3. Freistadt and The Lutheran Migration, Trinity Evangelical Lutheran Church of Freistadt, Mequon, Wisconsin.
4. There was an earlier American vessel (1850) with the same name. Posted to The Ships List by Ted Finch – 2 November 1997.
5. Found on Page 138 in Volume 23 – Germans to America – Lists of Passengers Arriving at U.S. Ports by Ira A. Glazier and P. William Filby.
6. The city of Hamburg, accommodating emigrants in the past and to this very day, is in exclusive possession of lists of those who passed through her utilizing the harbor. Bremen and other cities lost almost all these precious lists, but only Hamburg managed to safeguard complete records covering the flow of emigrants from 1850 to 1934. What makes these lists so valuable is that even the hometowns from whence the emigrants came is recorded. Anyone researching a family tree will treasure this crucial information. The American multiple-volume Glazier/Filby reference work Germans to America, covering U.S. immigration from 1850-90, is full of errors. However, the Hamburg Lists include all the German emigrants in addition to millions of people of other nationalities, mainly from eastern Europe. By the year 2003, the city of Hamburg expects to be able to display the lists for the entire period covering emigration from 1850 to 1934. The Hamburg State Archive is the source and safe-keeper of all emigrant lists stemming from this period as well as records of all Hamburg history. All the data pertaining to the emigrant lists are being processed and brought to the Internet. In April 2000, the Hamburg archives will offer Internet access to the first years: 1890-93.
7. The spelling of the town of Ahnepee was changed to Ahnapee.
8. Charles Yauger's obituary in the Kewaunee Enterprise dated 9 October 1952 indicates that he was born in Kellnersville.
9. North Atlantic Seaway by N. R. P. Bonsor, vol.1, p.393. Posted to The Ships List by Ted Finch – 23 November 1997.
10. Special censuses were taken by the territory or state in 1836, 1838, 1840, 1846, 1847, 1855, 1865, 1875, 1885, 1895, and 1905.
11. Reference sources routinely dismiss the 1890 census records as destroyed by fire in 1921. Examination of the records of the Bureau of Census and other federal agencies, however, reveals a far more complex tale. This is a genuine tragedy of records – played out before Congress fully established a National Archives – and eternally anguishing to researchers. A permanent Census Bureau did not exist until 1902, so the Department of the Interior administered the Eleventh Census. Political patronage was the most common order for appointment of the nearly 47,000 enumerators; no examination was required. 1 June 1890 was the official census date and all responses were to reflect the status of the household on that date. The 1890 census schedules were piled in an orderly manner on closely placed pine shelves in an unlocked file room in the basement of the Commerce Building. At about five o'clock on the afternoon of 10 January 1921, smoke was noticed coming through openings around pipes that ran from the boiler room into the file room. Firemen responded and poured large quantities of water into the building, and thankfully because of a fireproofed floor, fire did not go above the basement. When the archivists entered the vault the next day, they found water-damaged records. The 1890 census, stacked outside the vault, was first in the path of the firemen. Although twenty-five percent of the schedules incurred extensive damage, it was reported that the water-soaked and charred documents could be salvaged and restoration would take two to three years to copy and save all the records damaged in the fire. Even then, methods of restoring legibility of a water-soaked document were available. The disaster spurred citizenry outcries and support for restoring the documents. However, despite the outcry in 1921, thirteen years later the Census Bureau destroyed the remaining 1890 schedules.
12. The quotations from Ernest are taken from an article entitled, "Let's Get Acquainted," published in the Algoma Record-Herald on 22 November 1944. The article contained a photo of Ernest in his barn, stroking the forehead of one of his horses. There were a couple of things that were not correct, i.e., Ernest did not purchase his farm from John Fax, but from his father, Fred, who had recently made the transaction with Fax. The article did make it clear that Ernest was a fun-loving individual.

13. Joseph Schierow, living in Milwaukee, was retired and nearing his eighty-third birthday when he provided this contribution to the biography of Ernest and Amanda Heuer.
14. Kewaunee County, Wisconsin Tombstone Inscriptions compiled by the Kewaunee County Chapter of the Wisconsin State Old Cemetery Society in 1975 and 1977 and the Kewaunee County Web site, Cemetery Inscriptions, list this child's name as Wilhelmina Gericke, an obvious error since his grave marker reads Wilhelm.
15. Birth records in possession of authors, and on LDS Library film #1273097. St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church records show him being born in Treptow.
16. H. C. Cooper Jr., The History of Lincoln, Oneida and Vilas Counties, Minneapolis, MN, 1924.

APPENDIX B

ABOUT THIS BOOK

Contents

We fifth generation American Heuers accepted the challenge of researching historical data to verify personal statistics of all blood-related relatives of our progenitor. As Johann Friedrich Heuer formed the trunk of our family tree and the branches grew in different directions, our roots remained as one. Each of us will always be a part of the other. Throughout a daunting, prolonged discovery period, we endeavored to collect as much information as we could on each individual family unit, and sincerely hope that all of the persons contacted did not feel as if we were intruding in their privacy.

What is a family? According to Random House Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, it is, "any group of persons closely related by blood, as parents, children, uncles, aunts, and cousins." Another definition is, "all those persons considered as descendants of a common progenitor." The noun family may elicit various emotions like "self-doubt" from parents' judgments, or "guilt" from oppression. But members of families provide necessary balance to ensure survival of the bloodlines. Along with judgment come compassion and the willingness to forgive transgressions. At its best, families accept all members' behaviors and through forgiveness, they gain understanding of themselves and their neighbors.

The earliest records for births, deaths and marriages were kept by the churches, with the pastor being responsible for the record keeping. For some records in the 1600s, in a birth record, only the father's name and the name of the child and the date of birth and baptism, plus the sponsors, was given. The mother's name was completely omitted. The writing skills of the clergymen varied greatly and names were often misspelled. The old German writing, faded over time, challenged the best of translators. Adding yet another layer of confusion was the practice of our families repeated use of the same first and middle names for succeeding generations. Moreover, the Heuer families moved from village to village, albeit not any great distance, and their movements had to be traced. Churches were in charge of record keeping until 1874 when civil records were finally introduced in Prussia in October of that year. This practice was carried over to many states in the United States. Civil records were not mandated by the state of Wisconsin until after 1907.

We attempted to reconstruct the conditions under which they were living in Prussia, and how, under adverse circumstances, they developed personal attitudes which may have induced them to leave their homeland. Research showed that most 19th century European immigrants thought of themselves not as ex-citizens of a national state (which, in the case of Germany, for instance, did not even exist) but as speakers of a common tongue, or residents of a particular village or province. The Prussians were lured by the vision of unlimited economic opportunity and greater freedom than Central Europe offered in the post-Napoleonic era. They brought culture in varied forms, from singing groups to vineyards to poetry societies. More pioneering than some other ethnic immigrants, they helped develop America's hinterland, from Ohio westward and south to Texas.

When an immigrant reached America's shore, his paper trail began with a record of his arrival. How much information contained in individual records depended on the year and port of arrival. In the nineteenth century, the United States government, on numerous occasions, drafted passenger laws to place controls on immigration and to relieve overcrowded and unhealthy conditions aboard passenger ships. No federal restrictions existed until 1875, when criminals and prostitutes were forbidden to enter the United States. Until that time, each state placed its own restrictions on the influx of mentally ill and disabled persons, criminals, and paupers. It was only with the Passenger Act of 1882 that ships' captains were ordered to keep lists of passengers. Information to be recorded for each steerage passenger included name, age, sex, occupation, native country, and intended destination. Previously, beginning in the year 1820, the lists were required to include only the passenger's name, age, occupation, and the country to which he owed allegiance (not necessarily his native country). From 1820-70, immigrants from Germany totaled more than two million, with the majority of that number – 951,667 – immigrating during the decade of 1851-60.

During this research, we uncovered many family names that we had heard numerous times before but never made a connection to the Heuer name. We found a large number of Heuer descendants who, when interviewed, were unaware of their Prussian heritage, and others fervently contended that there were no "Heuers" in their ancestry. This book will serve to help dispute those debates and will undoubtedly prove to be a valuable tool for future genealogical research of related branches of the Heuer family tree.

Some families were unwilling to provide information necessary to complete their family history. In those instances, we used what we could obtain from other family members and sources, or we simply left the voids. Obituaries were used to provide the background information for many of our deceased relatives; however, to make the book flow and easier to read, contents were paraphrased into narratives, rather than directly quoted. A point of interest and a precaution for future researchers is that obituaries oftentimes contain erroneous information and they are not reliable sources. Further research on an individual usually provided more accurate information than was obtained through an obituary; however, sometimes all the information and the only sources on certain individuals were their obituaries.

Points to Remember

Records discussed in this book generally provided the most useful information. If the name of an individual appears different from what was commonly known, it is because the record was copied from either the baptismal name in the church records or from the original court house birth record. Even these recopied records did not always agree. Sometimes the only way to differentiate people with similar names was to identify them by middle name. For genealogical purposes, the most complete name is always most helpful; this included the first and last names.

Dates of birth at courthouses are frequently incorrect. For example, it was uncovered instances where a person was a year old when he was born. Some church records were not reliable to verify births either since errors were found in many of the different church records that were researched. However, if it were not for the churches and the information they kept in their records, all of us would be infinitely poorer in our knowledge of our ancestors.

Many death records are missing in courthouses (likewise marriage and birth records). Further researching was always necessary because we knew a person existed but vital information was not recorded. The next place to research was the church. Occasionally even a church record was missing or wrong. For example, Ernestine Heuer Gericke was born 21 May 1845 according to St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church, Algoma, Wisconsin records. Other official sources like the original church records from Borntin, Kreis Greifenberg, Prussia where she was born, documents her birth on 2 May 1845. One can only conclude that human error was responsible for the disparity in Ernestine's birth date.

Regarding marriage records, we were challenged to find accurate information due to a variety of circumstances. For example, since most marriages occur in the bride's hometown, we started data gathering in that city. When out-of-ordinary marriage arrangements like elopements or civil ceremonies occurred, we searched newspapers in either the bride or the groom's hometown paper. We sometimes learned that notices of civil ceremony weddings were published in the newspaper of the locality they will reside.

Property and probate records are often ignored by genealogists but they contain a wealth of information that fills in the gaps frequently left by records of vital statistics. Establishing where your ancestors lived provides information concerning a number of basic elements of their lives. For the early pioneers, it is essential information. Property records not only develop the history of a family's existence at a defined location but offers the researcher the opportunity to visit the scene and view the land, home, and surroundings. Once there, the experience is similar to seeing a photograph of an ancestor for the first time. Property records also frequently contain vital information about parents, siblings, and other relatives. Once the location of domicile has been pinpointed, neighbors can be identified, and their lives are almost always intertwined with the family being researched. In the research for this Heuer history, many basic questions about the family were solved by information found in property records.

Dates

The primary dates that we captured for any individual were birth, marriage, and death. Secondly dates were immigration, military service, adoptions, and divorces.

Ordinarily in the United States, the month will appear first, followed by the day of the month. In European countries, the day comes first and then the month. To avoid any misunderstanding, dates in the Johann Friedrich Heuer family book were written in the European way as day, month, and full year.

Early registrations of births, marriages, and deaths occurred as a matter of convenience and without regard for timeliness. Often rural births or other registrations were brought to the courthouse by the local pastor when he had an opportunity to get to town. Since the records were handwritten, there was a chance for error. In today's computerized, organized world, where we are on "data-overload," it is hard to imagine that vital documents were not that important. It was only in 1907 that registrations were required by state law.

From One Language to Another

The problem with taking a name from one language to another is multifaceted. The problem started when our immigrant ancestors boarded an English ship where personnel recorded their names on the passenger list. When they arrived in America, immigration clerks made a record of each incoming person. Then as he or his descendants moved or relocated, other clerks repeated the process. Today we have to cope with how our ancestor spelled his name – if he did – we may knowingly or unknowingly be living with what English-speaking officials made of each travelers name. Ship captains and clerks, courthouse officials, tax collectors, church pastors, and census takers all wrote down what they thought they heard. It is interesting to ask whether officials ever asked an immigrant how his name was spelled. The translation problem was improved in the 1800s; there were so many more immigrants by then, and many officials had German backgrounds themselves.

The matter of garbled names probably causes genealogists and historians more trouble than it did our ancestors. In retrospect, it would have been wiser if immigrants had been asked to spell their name for the officials. But then our ancestors would have used the German letters of the alphabet. Since we recite the alphabet beginning “aye, bee, see”; the German is “ah, bay, tsay,” so the same letter of the alphabet does not represent the same sound in different languages. Furthermore, a language may have a sound that cannot be spelled in another language, because it does not have that sound. We must accept that those record keepers did the best they could with what they had.

We found up to half a dozen different spellings of the same name, leading us to question whether it is the same name. To be sure, we needed to know whether we were sorting out three generations of a family in the same area, or tracking them back from Wisconsin to New York. We learned that the best way is to go by the sound, not by the spellings.

Objective: Inform and Entertain

We are all family inasmuch as we are a group of persons of common ancestry. The Heuer family, our family, with its roots in Wisconsin, is now scattered all over the United States. But, nonetheless, no matter where we have relocated, or how much we have changed over the years, or what new roles we have taken since leaving home, we are irrevocably associated with our position with the Heuer family as it once was.

Goal: Accuracy and Verification

We have endeavored to record only factual information on all individuals. Verification of data was accomplished through cross checks of available courthouse documents, church records, property and probate records, Family History Centers of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (LDS), the Wisconsin State Historical Society, the United States Army War College, city libraries, social security records, federal censuses and most important, from individuals themselves.

Since the conclusion of World War II, the LDS has financed the Genealogical Society of Utah’s work of methodically collecting and preserving records. Specialists are sent to archives around the world to locate and microfilm existing records. More than one hundred microfilmmers are presently filming original documents in courthouses, churches, and other archives in more than forty-five countries.

Master copies of microfilm rolls are stored in the Granite Mountain Records Vault in a mountain southeast of Salt Lake City. This society has dedicated itself to acquiring and preserving the records of mankind that once lay secreted in vaults, archives, sheds, attics, and cellars throughout the world. Thanks to the founders, millions of records have been saved from time, weather, and other destructive forces.

If it had not been for the LDS Family History Library, and the diligent research work conducted by Mrs. Gertrude Mayme Zimmerman Heuer, this book would not have contained all the vital information on our ancestors, or descendants.

Research

Tracing family lineage is now easier than ever, thanks to the Internet. The Social Security Death Index, which draws on more than six billion death-benefit recipient records starting in 1937, is now available on-line and is just one of many sources. Scores of other Web sites make it easy to find information. However, be forewarned that much of what is on the Web is akin to signposts, that is, lists of documents, but rarely the documents themselves, and much of the information posted on the Internet is posted by volunteers who transcribe cemetery headstones or newspaper obituaries – with predictable error.

If you are interested in genealogy and want to pursue a family in your lineage, you must be willing to commit to a search that is bound to be both labor-intensive and time-consuming. To start, you must first decide on a data-collection system to record each new twig on the family tree. Computers, with their ability to organize massive amounts of data, are much preferred to cards or other manually inscribed data sheets collated into three-ring binders. Remember that for each generation back, the number of parents' doubles; so that by the time you hit twenty generations, your database is up to more than a million.

Once you have a system, record everything you know about your family. Then interview relatives, oldest ones first, obtaining exact full names, dates, places and as many details as they can remember. Copy all official documents: birth, baptism, marriage, and death certificates, school and medical records, Bible inscriptions, property records, and military papers.

Genealogy unites families who have become splintered in today's mobile society. Research not only provides unexpected results, but also opens new avenues of communication. Who knows, you may get to know your family in an entirely different light after reading this Heuer family history or through conducting your own research.

APPENDIX C

Names

During the 17th and 18th centuries, multiple names were bestowed at birth or at christening. As a result, the children of peasants had many names because it was one of the few things for which there was no charge. In addition it was quite common to recycle a name if a child died very young. If there were two Johanns in a family, the most likely explanation would be that Johann was a common name to many (if not all) sons, which would be distinguished by a second given name, such as Karl, Friedrich, and so on. The second name was their common name or Ruffname. Whenever the use of the exact same name with both first and second names identical was found, the first bearer of the name had died before the other was born, or the elder Johann had stopped using his first name and was known by his second.

An example of why many German men dropped Johann from their name was provided by another genealogist. The oldest son was named Johann after a grandfather, father, or uncle named Johann. When the older man died, the younger Johann dropped that name, and he was called only by the second name by which he was baptized. To illustrate this point, we found one family with each of four sons with the first name of Johann and with a different second name.

History tells how lives of our ancestors were ravaged by death and disease. Babies and young children were often victims of contagious diseases and tragic accidents. Premature babies often went to their graves without names or any form of individual identification on their grave markers or church records. We were forced to assume parentage of these babies to discern proper family relationships.

In the German culture, the use of necronyms was only a means of preserving the naming pattern. Naming a newborn after a deceased child also paid tribute to the child who had died.

We have found that after emigration, our ancestors often reversed the order of their names. This practice might have been done to conform to the American practice of using the first name as the call name.

Some given names originated from the Bible as in John (Johann), Andrew, and David. These names were referred to as Christian names. Other names were drawn from important rulers like Augustus, the first Roman emperor or celebrated figures like Martin Luther, the German theologian and one of the leaders of the Protestant Reformation. Prussian, French, British, Russian, and Austrian royalty greatly influenced the giving of names. During certain historical periods, new parents often paid homage to their kings, queens, dukes, and duchesses by adopting their noble names for their children, such as Frederick Wilhelm, after the Prussian ruler King Frederick Wilhelm, or Ferdinand, after one of the Kings Ferdinand.

A Christian name serves a dual purpose. The term, Christian name, is synonymous with given name or first name, whereas the surname is the family name or last name. In some Christian denominations a child's given name is conferred on the child at its baptism, which is a Christian ritual. Sometimes the baptism itself is called the christening, although this terminology varies from one group to another.

In the 19th century, common male names such as Johann, Ferdinand, Friedrich, Karl, Wilhelm, Heinrich, and August were used repeatedly with many different combinations and spellings. Once in America, the German immigrants soon dropped the guttural German pronunciations and Johann became John; Wilhelm became William or Bill; Heinrich became Henry or Hank, and Friedrich became Frederick or Fred.

Women's names of the period were derivatives of male names such as Louis, Wilhelm, Friedrich, and August. The most popular female names were Louise, Wilhelmine, Friedericke, Caroline, Auguste, and Marie, and these names were sometimes found with an e or an a ending. In our genealogical research, we found Wilhelmine as Wilhelmina, and sometimes shortened to Minnie or Mina; Ernestine was shortened to Tina, and Auguste was found as Augusta, or Gustie. In German that last e is not silent, so Auguste and Augusta were pronounced almost exactly the same. The a ending is Latinized and is more commonly found in the church registers kept in Latin. The e on the end was more fashionable as a result of French influence.

The practice of using the middle name seemed to be a common practice with many Germans. Often they would use the middle name as their first name. For Louisa Friedricke Sophie Bergin, her baptism record from Sankt Petrus Church in Buffalo, New York listed her name as Maria Louise Bergin. On a later record, her name was changed to Louisa Friedricke Sophie Bergin, the name that we used.

Many times we would come across different spellings, especially with surnames. We had to remember that it was only recently that the law required us to change our name through the court system.

What prompted these name changes, we will never know for sure. All we can do is to make a note of all the different spellings and where they were found. All of these common conventions make genealogy a challenging, as well as, a frustrating science.

Heuer Names and Other Variations

During this research variations in the spellings of the Heuer name include: Heuern, found in some of the earliest records of the Heuers where the n was added to the surname to denote feminine gender; Heir, the first United States Census in which the Heuers were counted was in 1860 where the head of the house was listed as Fred Heir age 51 years, born 1809 – place of birth – Germany; Hyer, from August and Fred’s military records; Hier, as shown on Catharina Sophia and/or Rosina’s death certificate; Heuyer, where Bertha Heuer Zastrow’s death certificate has her father’s last name as Heuyer; Heyer, where a recorded warranty deed dated 12 October 1864 shows Frederick’s name as Heyer when property was transferred from Peter Schiesser and his wife Barbara; Hirr, from Door County Courthouse birth records for children of Bertha Heuer; Hewer, according to a passenger list, a Wilhelmina Hewer arrived in the United States on a separate ship from her parents and siblings; Hoir, the Federal Census Report of 1860 reflects Ernestine working as a domestic at the A. J. Eveland home, and she was counted there as Tina Hoir; Hindr, from Kewaunee County Courthouse, Kewaunee, Wisconsin birth record for a child of Charles Yauger and Marie Heuer; Hauer, when Ernestine married Henry Gericke, her name was recorded as Anestina Hauer. This Hauer spelling was found again on a warranty deed dated 1 November 1859 in which Frederick purchased property. Yet, further into the same document, his name is correctly spelled as Heuer; and Hoyer, the maiden name given for mother (Wilhelmina Heuer Bergin) on the death certificate of her daughter, Wilhelmina Bergin Schmidt. The name was spelled Heuser on the manifest of the ship Laura when the family embarked for the voyage to America. August Ferdinand Heuer’s surname was spelled Hayer on the Civil War enrollment lists. Arnold Ferdinand Jacob Heuer’s surname was spelled Hruer on a warranty deed when he purchased the Dier farm. On Lydia Zastrow’s death certificate, her mother’s name, Bertha Heuer, was written as Bartha Hiar. On a warranty deed, Fred Heuer’s name was Highyer, on another it was spelled Higher, and on a deed issued on 26 May 1880, Fred’s last name was spelled Heyer and his wife, Anna Rosina Heuer’s last name was spelled Heier on the same document. The name Huer was misspelled on another property transaction to Fred Heuer on 12 December 1895 and the same misspelling appeared on an application for pension by Caroline Berndt Heuer. Caroline also had her surname misspelled Hager on another application for pension. On a Bond of Support given by Arnold Ferdinand Jacob Heuer to his father, Fred, Arnold’s name was spelled Hener. Other spellings found were: Heur, Hora, Herr, Heer, Ojer, Ahr, Uhr, Hare, Heuerer, Auer, Heverer, Hower, Huier, and Heuier. There are probably others.

County courthouse records revealed many of the name changes and incorrect spellings. For example, the registration of August Heuer and Caroline Berndt’s marriage found in the Kewaunee County Courthouse marriage record #0081 dated May 1864 read, “August, son of Friedrich Heuer and mother Catharina,” which was her name given at her birth, her confirmation, and her marriage. In the registration for Ferdinand Heuer and Caroline Berndt’s marriage, Ferdinand’s mother is Catharina once again, found in the Kewaunee County Courthouse marriage record #0161. However, when her youngest son Frederick married, she was listed as Sophia, the name we most often see for her. The first time the name Sophie or Sophia appeared was on a ship passenger list. The surname Berndt was also found with numerous spellings. The spelling we chose to use in this book was used most frequently.

Records from different sources revealed many name and/or spelling changes. For instance, in the Ferdinand Heuer descendant line, his daughter Marie married Charles Yauger. When they married, the name Gauger was used in the Kewaunee County Courthouse marriage record. Sometime after that event, the name Gauger was changed to Yauger. The Kewaunee Enterprise newspaper account of Charles Yauger’s death announcement in October 1952 reflected the Gauger spelling. However, the Algoma Record-Herald newspaper report of his death revealed the Yauger spelling. This circumstance could have occurred through a misunderstanding of the name pronunciation, or it could have been intentional.

Raether was found in the ship passenger list as Rether. The name Stuebs was always written as Stübs, and sometimes found Stips, in German church records, and Brandt was frequently written as Brand. The name Stuth was found as Stute in St. John’s Evangelical Lutheran Church records. In some German references that name was also spelled Studt.

Another name change was found in the Ernestine Heuer Gericke line with the eldest son of Marvin Schiesser. In January 1980 he legally changed his name from Robert Marvin Schiesser to Robert John Thoreau.

In the Arnold Heuer family, there was a son, Orland, and a grandson, Ronald. Is it pure coincidence that these three names – Arnold, Orland, and Ronald – all have the same letters, but in different combinations?

From the time of Martin Heuer (1707 - 1771), Johann Friedrich Heuer’s great-grandfather, there was not a single Heuer in this line of descendance who used the names Martin and David for their sons. These two names had appeared with almost alarming regularity up until then, generation after generation, from the middle of the 16th century in the records that were found. Now they were passed over through the remainder of the nineteenth century.

Suddenly in 1934, a long way into the twentieth century – four generations later – a first son was born to Orland Heuer and Gertrude nee Zimmerman. He was named Martin Frederick Heuer. A year later in 1935, a second son was born to the same couple. The name given to him was David Arnold Heuer. No one involved in the selection of these names was even remotely aware of the history of the Heuer family at that time and the numerous usage’s of given names of Martin and David. To add further irony, the birth date of David Heuer of 16 October 1783 was the same date for Martin born 16 October 1934.

Alvin and Loretta nee Marquardt Heuer had two daughters whom they named Carolyn and Dorothy. Almost every Heuer family with daughters in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries had at least one Caroline and/or Dorothea. There is no answer for these phenomena. Some genealogists would argue that names are buried deep in our psyche and resurface periodically.

At any rate, we feel unique and wonderfully fortunate to have been the generation to bring these names back and to be the persons to make this record of those gone before us.

Meaning of Names

Until about 1100 A D most people in Europe had only one name which may still be the case in some primitive countries today. As the population increased, it became awkward to live in a village where perhaps one-third of the males was named Johann, another sizable percentage named Wilhelm, and so forth. To distinguish one Johann from another, a second name was needed.

Individual surnames originated for the purpose of more specific identification. During that period, four primary sources for second names were based on a person's occupation, location, father's name and personal characteristics.

For their occupation, the farmer, day laborer, weaver, rope maker, woodcutter, grain grinder and suit maker might be named respectively, Johann Ackermann, Johann Hofmann, Johann Weber, Johann Seiler, Johann Sawyer, Johann Miller, and Johann Schrader. It can be said that the most ancient and most interesting surnames are those derived from the occupation of the original bearer. Occupational names have provided what has been described by scholars as, "an inventory of the common trades of medieval Europe." Such names offer a glimpse into the daily lives of our ancestors. An example of location might be interpreted in their name as, the Johann who lived over the hill became known as Johann Overhill, the one who dwelled near a stream might be named Johann Brook or perhaps Johann Atbrook.

Many of the surnames can be recognized by the termination of the father's name – the son of, such as Christianson, Williamson, or Johannson. Personal characteristics which described the person might be used as their surname. An unusually small person might be labeled Small, Short, Little, or Lytle. A large man might be named Longfellow, Large, Lang, Langelly or Long. Many persons having characteristics of a certain animal would be given the animal's name. For example, a sly person might be named Fox; a good swimmer, Fish; or a quiet man, Dove.

The German family surname Heuer is classified as being of occupational origin. Heuer is derived from the Middle High German "höuwer" and means a hay farmer or hay mower, and is believed to be associated with one who made or sold hay. In year 1372, a Konstanz, Germany Heuer had arms of a rake and a pitchfork in its seal. It is also possible that this surname is derived from the Old High German verb "höuwen" meaning to chop or hack. In this case, the name denotes one who chops, such as a butcher, a woodcutter or a stonemason. Different spellings of the same original surname were a common occurrence and dependent on location. Low German, frequently in the Heidelberg, Germany area, pronunciation and spelling was Hauer or Hoyer.

Another possibility is the German term for a day laborer or hireling occupation was Heuerling, and Heuer may be a derivative. Other interpretations are that Heuer means, this day, this year, or pay that a merchant marine receives. Dictionaries of surnames indicate probable spelling variations. The most prominent variations of Heuer are Hewer, Hewar, Heyer, Hayer, and Hoyer, although as indicated previously, we have encountered many more in this genealogical research.

Pronouncing the name Heuer can result in as many variations as the spelling. In German, the word for fire is Feuer and pronounced "foyer." It follows that the Prussian/German name Heuer was pronounced "Hoyer" by the immigrant families, relatives, and friends as they conversed in the German language almost exclusively in the early years. Even church services were conducted in German. But Heuer is a very difficult name to pronounce by people who are unfamiliar with the German language. The pronunciation produces many varieties and one who has that surname is frequently forced to spell it every time a new contact is made. Fortunately, it is a short name, but even when spelling it for people they usually cannot record it correctly because there are few English words that have an e followed by a u, followed by an e, and then an r.

Some of the few Heuer's encountered in other parts of the country pronounce their names "Hewer." The acceptance of that pronunciation was a result of them settling in an area where few other Germans lived. The name was pronounced like it looked – "He-u-er" – Hewer, and that is how the name evolved in that instance. Others changed the German spelling – Heuer – to the German sound, in English, resulting in the name being changed to "Hoyer." Yet another is "Hauer," where the first e is replaced with an a to come closer to the German pronunciation. And the list of variations goes on and on.

Places

Places of births, baptisms, confirmations, marriages, divorces, and deaths were recorded in this history as town or township, then the county, and then state. This methodology may appear to be repetitious, however, we felt that it was necessary and helpful to future researchers.

Place Names

Many places in Germany beginning with K today had a C instead of a K in the 1800s, such as, Karnitz–Carnitz; Kammin–Cammin; and Koln–Coln.

Even in the new country, many distinct spellings were found. Towns changed names as they grew. When in its embryonic stage around 1851, the area that we now recognize as Algoma was first known as Wolf River. The name Wolf River was changed to Ahnepee on 10 May 1859. Ah-Ne-Pe is the Indian name for Gray Wolf. The spelling changed from Ahnepee to Ahnapee in 24 January 1878. Under Chapter 120, private and local laws of 1879, on 28 February, the village of Ahnapee was incorporated into a city. On 7 September 1897 (by Ordinance #19 of 7 June 1897) it was renamed Algoma, an Indian word meaning, “park of flowers,” or “snow shoe.”

It can be confusing to read town of Ahnapee in one place, or Ahnapee Township in another, or Ahnapee Town in yet another. We tried to capture the name as it was written in the original document or record.

Towns and Townships

Civil towns were created by the Wisconsin Constitution to provide basic municipal government services, such as elections, property tax administration, road construction and maintenance, emergency medical services and fire protection. The town form of government was brought into Wisconsin from New England in territorial days. Wisconsin is a public domain state with one principal meridian (established in 1831). Of the nine government land office land districts, the earliest opened in 1834 was at Mineral Point; the last closed in 1925 at Wausau. The local records of these districts are at the Commissioner of Public Lands, 127 W. Washington Ave., Madison, WI 53703.

The terms town and township are sometimes used interchangeably. But in Wisconsin, the words are not identical. The word town denotes a unit of government, while a township is a surveyor’s term describing the basic grid framework for legal descriptions of all land in the state to include land in cities and villages. Originally, most towns and townships were six miles by six-mile squares, or thirty-six square miles, but natural and man-made boundaries, such as rivers and county lines, for example, caused some variation. This township was then broken into thirty-six squares, like on a checkerboard, each a mile square. This is what is called a section. A section has 640 acres. Although somewhat different from one area to another, and times of settlement, an immigrant applied to homestead a quarter section, or piece of ground one-half mile by one-half mile-square, or 160 acres. Homesteaders in some areas also got another eighty acres, or an eighth of a section, if they promised to plant eighty acres of the total 240 in trees.

Sections are numbered from one to thirty-six, starting in the northeast corner and snaking down. So, you go from one to six on the first row, from east to west, then seven to twelve on the second row from west to east, and so on. All other gradations after that are labeled by the corner of a unit. So, for example, a twenty-acre piece could be labeled the northern twenty acres of a forty-acre parcel, which is the northeast forty acres of the southeast quarter section of section twelve in the Ahnapee Township in Kewaunee County.

In a township, there would ideally be from 144 farmers at 160 acres to a farm, or ninety-six farmers at 240 acres per farm, to each farm to start out with. The township was the political and social unit around which life revolved in those days. These 100 or so farmers would elect their township boards to determine policies on the school for the township, including roads, and bridges. Townships were of more consequence in the early days than they are now, where most decisions are made at the county level today.

A typical township would have seventy-two miles of roads crisscrossing through it, plus boundary roads of twenty-four miles (four sides x six miles) all around the township shared by the neighboring townships. Once in awhile, the surveyors needed a hiccup to account for the situation that not all degrees of latitude maintain the same distance as the surveyor moves north. This hiccup was established by laying out a line, which typically was a road and dividing line, called the Parallel, to get the surveyors back on target.

In a few states patterned on New York state, the rural areas of a county are divided into civil towns. It is phrased as, “town of _____.” Like townships in other states, towns had one-room schools, road and fence inspectors, and justices of the peace. The boundaries of a civil town may or may not correspond to a federal land record township; in Winnebago County, Wisconsin only one of the sixteen towns is a regulation six miles square.

Civil towns do not show on a Wisconsin state highway map. Cities and villages with the same name as a civil town may exist within it. Examples are: Oshkosh, Omro, Winneconne. There may also be unincorporated communities in a civil town. These have no separate government. Some are the remnants of old villages including discontinued post offices.

There can be even be more than one civil town in Wisconsin with the same name. In addition to the town of Utica in Winnebago County, there is one in Crawford County also. There are towns of Marshfield in Fond du Lac and Wood Counties.

The sixteen civil towns in Winnebago County are Algoma, Black Wolf, Clayton, Menasha, Neenah, Nekimi, Nepeuskun, Poygan, Oshkosh, Omro (formerly Bloomingdale), Rushford, Utica, Vinland, Winchester, Winneconne, and Wolf River.<sup>1</sup>

Other Name Changes

Newspapers thus changed accordingly. The Ahnapee Record was the second newspaper in Kewaunee County, the Kewaunee Enterprise being the first. Kewaunee County newspapers came and went, promulgated and denounced by public demand and challenged editors and writers, as illustrated in the following chart, developed from information published on the Kewaunee County Wisconsin Genealogy Web site:

Riverview Cemetery, Kewaunee was also known as Riverview Public Cemetery, and West Kewaunee Township Cemetery. Evergreen Cemetery, Algoma had been known as the Busch Cemetery and Defaut Cemetery before the name changed to Evergreen Cemetery. Since deaths were not legally required to be recorded until the early 1900s, deceased relatives were often buried in family burial plots or in church cemeteries. Some of the early family burial plots were located in the backyards of the homestead farmhouse. In most cases, if there were any headstones, they are no longer visible.

KINSHIPS

Cousins

How are family trees generated and recorded? Each person has one set of parents – a mother and a father – four grandparents, eight great-grandparents, sixteen great-great-grandparents, and so on. You can see that one’s lineal ancestry doubles with each subsequent generation.

If we calculate the numbers, every one of us alive today could have had in the year 400 AD some 18.5 quintillion ancestors and this equation does not consider collateral relatives. The result of this calculation is staggering and exceeds the population of the earth – then or now. Indeed, this is far more than the number of human beings whoever lived. Then, something must be wrong with this calculation. We have assumed all those lineal ancestors to be different people. But this is not the case. The same distant ancestor is related to us by many different routes. We are repeatedly connected with our relatives and it appears that every marriage brings cousins together.

When two people originate from the same geography, and if their genealogies are well recorded, the last common ancestor can be discovered. But, whether it can be discovered or not, a relationship is clear: We are all cousins – all members of a vast world-girdling family.

We have cousins, first cousins, second cousins, and so on. Additionally we may have a first cousin once removed and a first cousin twice removed. Defining cousins and removed can be quite complicated and difficult to understand. A cousin is a person related by descent in a diverging line from a known common ancestor.

If your parents have siblings any child of your aunt and uncle is your cousin. If that cousin has a child that child is a first cousin once removed to you or one generation removed from being a first cousin. If you have a child, your child is a second cousin to your first cousin’s child.

If your first cousin has a grandchild that grandchild is a first cousin twice removed to you and a third cousin to your grandchild.

Graphically, the formula is:

	Parent
Child	Sibling	Child
GChild	Cousin	GChild
GGChild	2nd Cousin	GGChild
G2GChild	3rd Cousin	G2GChild
G3GChild	4th Cousin	G3GChild
G4GChild	5th Cousin	G4GChild

Twins

Twenty-five sets of twins were found in the Johann Friedrich Heuer family descendants and related families. Of those twenty-five sets, nine sets of twins were found in Wilhelmine Caroline Rosaline Heuer Bergin Brandt’s family line; six sets of twins in Ferdinand Carl Heuer’s family line; four sets of twins in Augusta Marie Elizabeth Heuer Raether’s line; three in Johann Friedrich Heuer’s line; two in Ernestine Caroline Friedericke Heuer Gericke’s line; and one in Bertha Friedericke Sophie Heuer Zastrow’s line.

There are five sets of twin boys; nine sets of twin girls; and ten sets of boy-girl twins. One set of twins, born 9 August 1893 to Anna Bergin and Herman Hoppe died soon after birth and both were buried without being named or identified by gender.

Multiple births are rare. More than 98 percent of all human pregnancies result in single offspring; multiple births, which account for the rest, occur with rapidly decreasing frequency the higher the multiple. Almost all higher-multiple pregnancies result in premature babies. Multiple births may be identical, fraternal, or (in cases other than twins) some combination of these. Identical births are monozygotic – that is, they arise from a single fertilized egg (zygote) that at some stage in its development separates into two or more embryos. Such births share the same genetic material and are always of the same sex. Fraternal births are polyzygotic: they arise from two or more fertilized eggs and may be of either sex.

Babies born in multiple births tend to be smaller and premature; they are at greater risk for health problems. On average, they are half the weight of other babies at birth and arrive seven weeks earlier.

GENOGRAMS

Relative Risks in Your Family Tree

Early warning signs of health problems that may lie ahead can be found by studying the details of your family's medical past. More than 3,000 ailments are now known to be inherited, including heart disease, cancer, diabetes, arthritis, Alzheimer's, even alcoholism, depression, thyroid disease, and schizophrenia. New ones are added to the list every day. When found, causes of death were entered into the individual family tree and also written into the biography of each person.

A Sample Genogram

EVEN A QUICK GLANCE at a health family history can reveal a lot. This one, for example shows a clear pattern of heart disease among the men in the Winters family. Other genetic links may be less obvious. Only a doctor would know, for example, that because Jane Winter's mother had a duodenal ulcer, she is three times as likely as most other people to develop one herself.

You can create your own Genogram or health family tree. Starting with your grandparents, fill in their full names and their dates of birth and death. Next, add as much as you can about the health of all your close relatives; include chronic ailments such as ulcers or allergies, as well as major surgeries and causes of death. The more specific the information, the better. Some genetically linked cancers, for example, can be remarkably specific – right down to whether a tumor first appears on the right or left side of the colon.

Where memories fail, official records may be useful. Further details can be found in death certificates. To locate them, call or write the Division of Vital Records of Division of Statistics in the state where the relative died. In the absence of death certificates, a burial or transit permit may provide information about the death of an ancestor. Some hospitals and doctors also keep permanent archives of medical records on microfilm. To get health records for your relative, you will need a letter of consent from the closest living relative, as well as a copy of the death certificate.

When your Genogram is complete, sit down with your family doctor and talk about any obvious patterns that show up. An illness or health condition that appears more than once – especially if it showed up in relatives before age fifty-five – should get special attention. Knowing your predisposition toward a disease makes prevention easier, either by changing high-risk behaviors or simply by detecting ailments early.
